

drive intends to destroy the central farm marketing mechanism, the cooperative.

Under the guise of "anti-trust" probes, the coordinated watergating of farm coops is directed by H.J. Heinz III's "House Republican Task Force on Antitrust and Monopoly Problems." The task force's first target was "the food industry." "After all," said Heinz, "who should know it better than I?"

Heinz, a Republican congressman from Pittsburgh, is the son of H.J. Heinz II, chairman of the multi-billion dollar food company and a prominent spokesman for Rockefeller's mass starvation World Food Conference held in Rome earlier this month.

The task force was behind the months-long attack on the Associated Milk Producers, Inc., an attack that emerged from the original CIA Watergating of the Nixon administration.

Currently, the task force is taking the National Broiler Marketing Association and the Central California Lettuce Producers to task in an attempt to strip them of their anti-trust exemption.

The farm cooperatives walk a fine line legally: They are exempt from the traditional anti-trust rulings, but at the same time they are forbidden to engage in "other monopolistic practices."

The "anti-monopoly" attack is aimed to destroy every vestige of an independent farm marketing mechanism. This destruction of the agricultural infrastructure is preparation for bringing what's left of U.S. farm production and distribution under centralized Rockefeller control.

DAIRYLEA GOONS EJECT LABOR PARTY ORGANIZERS

Nov. 25 (IPS)--Goons ejected U.S. Labor Party organizers from tonight's meeting of Dairylea Cooperative members in Middleburg, New York. Most farmers attending were in a desperate mood--many of them drunk--since Dairylea had just decided to assess its members a total of $18.6 million to make up its huge deficit. The farmers' rage has been diverted, in many cases, into swinish, anti-labor sentiments, typified by one farmer's comment: "You're from labor....How much will a worker pay for my milk?"

Those farmers, however, who paused for a briefing by Labor Party organizers on how Rockefeller engineered the farm credit squeeze immediately bought copies of New Solidarity. They wanted to read more about how the present pitting of farmers against worker-consumers can be overcome through the Labor Party's campaign for an emergency farm debt moratorium and expanded food production.

Pete Schuyler, who appeared to have been briefed in advance on the Labor Party by Dairylea top officials, led the expulsion of Labor Party organizers. This is the second Dairylea meeting from which organizers have been excluded, indicating that Dairylea officials are playing a criminal role in "protecting" their members from the only kind of organizing which can halt the collapse of dairy farming.
