

European Labor Party Gains Victory Against Bundespost

The European Labor Party in West Germany won a major victory this week when the Federal Postal Ministry intervened to overturn heavy financial demands placed on the organization by the Bundespost as a condition for maintaining the ELP's telephone service and other communications equipment. The Bundespost is controlled by Walter Hesselbach, a leading figure in German Israeli- and Rothschild-linked Zionist circles.

At the same time, however, the National Caucus of Labor Committees, the cadre organization which founded the ELP's U.S. co-thinker organization the U.S. Labor Party, is faced with a summary judgment for $90,000 awarded Sept. 6 to the Bank of Nova Scotia in a lawsuit against the NCLC. A New York State Supreme Court judge ruled favorably on the bank's claim that a $90,000 credit to the NCLC was merely a bank transfer error. The Bank of Nova Scotia is controlled by Eagle Star Insurance Company, which also controls the financial interests of whiskey magnate and Zionist leader Edgar Bronfman. Like most British insurance companies, Eagle Star is a cover for British intelligence operations.

Under Hesselbach's direction, the Bundespost had been threatening to cut the ELP's business phone and the private phone lines of three ELP members unless some $16,000 — mostly in deposits — was paid on the party's account by Sept. 3.

After a call by ELP officials to the Postal Ministry to complain of the Bundespost demands, during which the ELP warned that the party was planning to hold rallies throughout West Germany, Europe and in the the United States against the financial threat, the Bundespost contacted the ELP headquarters in Wiesbaden and asked that the demonstrations be cancelled. Postal Ministry officials explained that the Ministry had intervened to reverse the Bundespost demands, and said that all phone service to individual ELP members would be restored, and that the party would be given a 14-month period to consolidate its debt.

The Postal Ministry's move came as a result of well-placed international pressure and, within West Germany, the exposure of the Bundespost as an intelligence and terror conduit for networks operating as part of the Hesselbach apparatus.

the Heritage Foundation designed to convince corporate and security officers of major U.S. banks and corporations that the Labor Party was a terrorist organization engaged in industrial espionage for variously East European and Soviet intelligence.

This slander and the one in circulation now are like those circulated since at least 1975 by Georgia Representative Larry McDonald. In December 1975 McDonald inserted into the Congressional Record a slander authored by his aides Herbert Rommerstein, an ADL intelligence stringer, and John H. Rees, a British Intelligence agent, that the Labor Party is an East German intelligence and terrorist organization. In July 1977, McDonald contributed the slander that the USLP is a terrorist, paramilitary, and totalitarian organization to the John Birch Society's Review of the News. McDonald has been instrumental in isolating conservatives and conservative organizations from collaboration with the Labor Party.

The intended effect of the Heritage Foundation slander was to similarly isolate LaRouche from potential collaborators in the effort to bring the U.S. economy into the then-emerging new world monetary system. The free enterprise Heritage Foundation is directly linked to the British Round Table and Rothschild networks.

Prior to LaRouche's arrival in Detroit, personnel from the U.S. Labor Party's Executive Protection section began to pick up evidence of surveillance. This deployment and the later attempted "hit" were gridded back to agencies linked to Zionist Lobby agent Max Fisher, agencies which exercise control over various gutter-level terrorist gangs like Detroit's Communist Labor Party. Fisher himself is an important link into the British-based Order of St. John of Jerusalem — the masterminds of the "hit" attempt. Fisher is a member of the Jerusalem Foundation, the "Hofjuden" division of that Order.

On July 16, two vehicles, both driven by black men in their early twenties, attempted to block the exit and entrance to Detroit's Veterans' Memorial Hall, where LaRouche was scheduled for a public appearance. A slight delay in LaRouche's arrival allowed for the two cars to be removed.

This attempt to entrap is the characteristic modus operandi of terrorist hits like the kidnappings of West German industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer and former Italian Premier Aldo Moro.

...And Now

The current international deployment against the Labor Party is being run in the United States by the shock troops of the B'nai B'rith's Anti-Defamation League and in Europe by the Paris-based Inter-
