

'International terrorism' hits the United States

About a week ago, immediately following the bloody shoot-out in Greensboro, North Carolina, an Iranian student from Riverside City, California was found dead from a bullet in the back of the neck. According to press accounts of the incident, the Ku Klux Klan claimed credit for the execution. Within days of the California incident, another Iranian student took a rifle out and gunned down a 16-year-old Denver youth who had been participating in an anti-Iranian demonstration earlier in the day. Riots and demonstrations, for and against Iran, and assorted violent clashes throughout the nation continued throughout the week. Even the Greensboro events have not been fully played out, as the crazy Communist Workers Party held an armed funeral march last Saturday for their fallen "comrades." Fortunately, the State and local police managed to arrest 35 members of the group, thus avoiding a replay of the earlier gun battle between the KKK and CWP.

Most average Americans would see these incidents as isolated detestible events which every normal American wishes to avoid. However, the recent events only foreshadow what is in store. What average Americans, as well as intelligence officials and law enforcement agencies are actually seeing are the initial phases of a fullscale terrorist activation within the borders of the United States.

This is no mere accident. As of July of this year, a major "Conference on Terrorism" took place at the Jonathon Institute in Jerusalem, Israel, which laid out in detail the terrorist scenario now rapidly unfolding in America. This conference represented the planning phase for what is now being implemented, as a conscious policy to destabilize U.S. political and economic life.

The political faction responsible for these developments may be generically identified as the "Kook" grouping composed of leading British oligarchic forces and their Jesuit and Zionist allies. Between Georgetown (Jesuit) University in the U.S.; Britain's top terrorist controllers in the Institute for the Study of Conflict, an offshoot of British Secret Intelligence Service's Tavistock Institute; and leading Israeli intelligence officials and U.S.-based Zionist Lobby spokesmen, a Mideast run terrorist deployment into the U.S. has been carefully planned. Some of the key figures were Brian Crozier, Robert Moss, Lord Chalfont from Britain; Ray Cline from Georgetown, Senator Henry Jackson and others. It was intended that the terrorist wave be coordinated with a projected invasion of the Persian Gulf by U.S. Special Forces. All that was needed was a major Mideast crisis. Iran became the perfect pretext.

This kook faction's deployment of Muslim Brotherhood-sponsored terrorism is part of the broad scheme now unfolding around Iran which has as its intended result the ruination of U.S. power economically and politically. For the kooks, that is key to their international objective, a "New Dark Age."

A new 'Tar Baby Option'

A few years ago, the U.S. State Department and the neo-Fabian Institute for Policy Studies created a plan for race riots and terrorism in the U.S. as a result of racial upheavals that were going on in Southern Africa. The plan, dubbed the "Tar Baby Option" authored by Anthony Lake, a former protege of Henry Kissinger, attempted to "playback" the effects of the 1975 events in South Africa into the U.S. as a means for establishing a racial identification of U.S. black citizens with South African blacks. Domestic racial turmoil would have been provoked in connection with a (Persian Gulf-style) invasion of the region to protect "vital oil routes." This could not be carried out because, according to former Lt. Gen. William Yarborough, one of the top counter-insurgency specialists in the U.S., the U.S.'s geopolitical interests were not really at stake. The "oil routes" pretext wouldn't wash.

However, the Iran crisis provides the unique situation which allows the "playback effect" to work in the U.S. What the Iranian crisis allows the Muslim Brotherhood and its controllers from British Intelligence to do is to activate the Iranian Student Association organizations and related politically corrupt elements of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Nearly 50,000 Iranian students attend U.S. universities giving a wide political and social base to draw from. Since 1976 and the failure of the "Tar Baby Option," the Anglo-Jesuit kooks have sought to engage Muslim Brotherhood forces for an identical project.

To fully appreciate the manner in which this unfolding scenario is presently being carried out, there must be an identification of two key individuals in policy-making positions within the Carter administration, who are directly accountable for this policy course. National Security Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski is the indispensable figure in the entire scheme. Without Brzezinski's endorsement of the Khomeini regime's overthrow of the Shah and his subsequent support for Khomeini's policy, none of the present crisis could have occurred. The other key figure is U.S. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti whose unmitigating support for terrorism is evidenced by his release of the four Puerto Rican terrorists who shot up Congress in 1954 and his removal of the Weatherunderground from the FBI investigations list. His recent pronouncements on cracking down on the Iranian students amounts to nothing short of a hoax. In fact, Civiletti's moves at this point will only further the terrorist deployment.

Unless there is a concerted political effort to name the names publicly, to clearly identify the forces responsible for the present crisis, namely Brzezinski and his brethren in the Muslim Brotherhood, then the chances for reversing the situation will slip out of our reach.

Greensboro: job by the Anti-Defamation League

On Nov. 3 five leaders of the Communist Workers Party (CWP) were killed and ten others were wounded by members of the right-wing, terrorist White Alliance in a shoot-out which erupted at a "Death to the Klan" rally that the CWP organized in Greensboro, N.C. An EIR investigation over this past week has uncovered the fact that both the left-wing "victims" in the CWP and their Klan and Nazi "assailants" were merely acting out in "living theater" fashion a scenario for an outbreak of domestic terrorism that was drafted at the Jerusalem Conference on Terrorism last July and directed through such terrorist-coordinating agencies as the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Institute for Policy Studies.

While investigators have so far failed to locate the "smoking gun" that could be used to bring leaders of the ADL and IPS before a court of justice as accessories to murder, a trail of evidence, leading directly to these agencies' doors, has been developed by looking into the background of individuals known to be associated with persons on both sides of the shoot-out.

The White Alliance, to which the 15 Klansmen and Nazis arrested for alleged complicity in the Greensboro murder all belong, is a Southern-based, right-wing umbrella group that is closely linked to other Klan-Nazi groups known to be controlled by paid agents of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Among these affiliated groups is the Pennsylvania Klavern of the Confederation of Independent Orders of the Invisible Empire, whose Grand Dragon, Ray Doerfler, was in regular contact with those White Alliance members arrested for the Greensboro murders.

Doerfler is currently raising a legal defense fund for the arrested Klansmen. But, in an interview last week with an EIR investigator, Doerfler made statements which indicate that his involvement goes far deeper: "We support our boys ... Look, we taught them how to kill Communists ... It ("racial" violence) has begun. We can't restrain people ... If it was up here, there would be a lot more of them dead. Our boys are better shots."

James Rosenberg

Incredibly, the man whom Doerfler has publicly named as "the brains" behind his Klan outfit, James Rosenberg (a.k.a. "Jimmy Mitchell"), is a self-admitted, paid agent of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith
