

Editorial

Stop the plot against India!

Claiming to be part of the "Western democracies," the Sikh terrorist-separatist movement vowed on June 11 to "support anything that will help destroy the Indian central power." This vow, coming from the London headquarters of the so-called Khalistan Liberation Movement, heralds the beginning of a new, more violent attack against the Indian nation state.

But such an attack will not serve the interest of the West, as the terrorists claim. Anyone who gets involved in destabilizing India is playing the Kissinger-KGB game, a game whose success would destroy the leading superpower of the developing sector, and hand it in pieces to the Soviet Union.

It is true that the pedigree of most of the groups now actively working against the national government of India is "Western," i.e., British. Still smarting over their failure to break up India into a mass of squabbling little ethnic states, the British maintain active case files on how to manipulate and exacerbate tensions between India's multifarious ethnic and religious groups. Cambridge- and Oxford-trained anthropologists are routinely sent in to profile and rile up certain sections of the population. And London is the home away from home for terrorist leaders aspiring to foment civil war.

Such a terrorist leader is Chauhan Singh, the self-appointed head of the recently created "Khalistan Republic's government in exile." Singh resides in London, where he organizes exiles from the subcontinent, and receives advice from the counterinsurgency experts in the London Foreign Office. In line with the alliance of a major section of the British oligarchy with the Swiss gnomes and the Soviets, Chauhan Singh also receives funding from the Swiss-based Nazi International, and acknowledges occasional visits to the chief center of Soviet insurgency in the Muslim world, Tashkent.

Singh's alliance with the Nazi International is best reflected in the deal he has made with the Muslim fundamentalists, who are deploying globally on the basis of the Swiss-Soviet alliance. The Muslims are the motive force behind the terrorist-separatist insurgency in the Indian Kashmir, a longstanding area of tension between the nations of India and Pakistan.

This British-supported movement for "religious freedom" is just a new face for the support of the Nazi International-Soviet deal, the same deal we saw at work in the British-backed revolution of Khomeini. Is it not yet clear to even the most naive observer that the backing of Muslim fundamentalists "against communism" and a "corrupt state" in Iran has turned into an abomination against humanity? Is it also not clear that Western support for Khomeini has not only destabilized a previous area of strong Western influence, but has virtually handed the area over to the Soviet Union and its Muslim Card experts?

True, the pro-separatist lobby in Washington is loud and clear. "Experts" like Soviet agent of influence Henry Kissinger and Club of Rome ghoul Claiborne Pell insist that weakening the Indian government will "hurt" the Soviet, communist cause in Asia. They are playing the same game they did in Iran—and to the same benefit.

But American patriots have no choice. The great nation of India must be saved.

India's importance lies not only with her size or leading position in the Non-Aligned movement. Imbued with a fiercely republican commitment, India's ruling elite has nurtured an excellence in science and technology which has put India in the ranks of the United States and the U.S.S.R. in numbers and quality of scientific cadre. The progress made in agriculture and the nuclear industry under Mrs. Indira Gandhi are only symptomatic of that commitment.

India's commitment to scientific progress has brought her straight up against the imperial games being played by both the Soviet Union and the British-run State Department in the United States. So far she has held out with difficulty. But it is not clear she can stave off this new offensive, now targeting her key food-producing region (the Punjab), her nuclear industry, and her central government.

We demand the immediate cut-off of the Khalistan, Muslim, and other separatists. That will disappoint the Soviets, but if the West wants a free and independent India, it is the indispensable step.