

of the federal government—like the late Averell Harriman and George Bush—are not mentioned at all. Nor do the authors draw the obvious connection between the late Paul VI's Populorum Progressio and Humanae Vitae in fighting these "structures of sin," as they were called by the current pontiff in Sollicitudo Rei Socialis.

It is also an important omission, that although the clear ties to the imperial policies of the British oligarchy which we have mentioned, are all based on information in the book, the authors don't make that connection, nor do they seem to notice that Margaret Sanger's birth control movement fed on the despair born out of the meatgrinder that was World War I, which was the result of deliberate British imperial policies, and the ensuing, hideous injustice of the Versailles Treaty, imposed by the British and French after that war, which led to Fascism, Nazism, Communism—and to World War II.

The authors do expose Gen. William Draper, Jr. of the Population Fund for helping Sanger in her campaign to subvert the Catholic hierarchy and even to pressure the pope.

The following needs to be added: General Draper and his son William H. Draper III, longstanding intimates of the Bush family, did succeed in their decades-long project to make the dispensing of birth control a key instrument of American foreign policy. General Draper, the vice-chairman of the Planned Parenthood Federation, has guided George Bush's thinking on population matters for decades, from 1969 when Congressman Bush was an overt advocate of birth control to stop the spread of "undesirables," down to the present. The younger Draper was co-chairman for finance (chief of fundraising) of the Bush-for-President national campaign organization in 1980; he now runs population control programs at the United Nations, where the Chinese model of forced abortions and infanticide is shamelessly inflicted on poor nations, with the complicity of the U.S. State Department.

These facts make it clear unless the battle is broadened to encompass a struggle for economic justice against the British system of slave labor and usury, the pro-life militants who read this book will go down to certain defeat. It seems to us that many patriots in Ibero-America who are engaged in the fight for their sovereignty, for national economic development, and against the forced sterilization and other population control programs being pushed abroad—by the same political figures exemplified by Bush, Clinton and Perot—have a somewhat better understanding of the scale of the battlefield.

To all who wish to defend life without "exceptional circumstance" asterisks on their commitments, it will be most informative for them to reflect on the reference which provides the title to the book. As Christ was being led to his Crucifixion, he warned: "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children. For behold! The days are coming when they will say, 'Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bore, and the breasts that never gave suck!' . . . For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?"

EIR issues population book

Executive Intelligence Review released in June its new Special Report, "The Genocidal Roots of Bush's 'New World Order.'" The 188-page report, which sells for $250 and is available from EIR at P.O. Box 17390, Washington, D.C. 20041-0390, documents the origins and scope of the policy of the U.S. government to depopulate especially developing sector nations—a policy put forward under the Carter administration, in the infamous Global 2000 Report, and being realized under the Bush new world order.

Edited by U.S. Club of Life chairman Nancy Spanaus, the report makes the case that the ideology of "zero population growth"—or even, nowadays, negative population growth—is genocidal. It elaborates one of the key components of Lyndon LaRouche's economic theory: that the world needs more people, not fewer.

Included in the documentation are:

- the relationships, both ideological and practical, between the Nazi genocidalists and the "population control" movement in the U.S. in the 1930s;
- the evolution of that lobby into the maker of policy for the U.S. government;
- how U.S. depopulation policy has been tested and applied, including in the Vietnam War and, more recently, in the program which sterilized roughly half of Brazil's women of child-bearing age.
- the recently declassified National Security Study Memorandum 200, written under the direction of Henry Kissinger and Brent Scowcroft in the 1970s, which defines population growth as the enemy of the United States, and targets over a dozen poorer countries on its "population enemies list."
- George Bush's involvement, since his days in Congress, in promoting "eugenics" and depopulation.
- the goals and activities of the premier anti-population organizations, from the Club of Rome to the Worldwide Fund for Nature;
- quotes from the leading depopulation ideologues, from Parson Thomas Malthus of 18th-century England, to Prince Philip and John D. Rockefeller III today.
- a case study of the demographic collapse of the Roman Empire, showing the human, environmental, and ecological devolution which was caused by the depopulation.
