It's never too late

The election of Benjamin Netanyahu to be prime minister of Israel can only be understood in the context of how the British have orchestrated events to sabotage President Clinton's peace initiative in the Middle East. The sabotage escalated dramatically with the murder of Yitzhak Rabin on Nov. 4 of last year. Three months later, a terror wave was launched against Israel by Arab extremists, which culminated in the firing of Katyusha rockets from Lebanese territory. Finally, there was Israeli military retaliation against the civilian population of Lebanon. In short, a political disaster.

Prime Minister Rabin was by no means the only target of the British-inspired terror wave. The British have acted in furtherance of their global, imperialistic strategy; and, they have found willing collaborators within both Arab and Jewish groups. This created the conditions in which Netanyahu was able to win a bare majority of the votes in the recent Israeli election.

A major role in this cabal, has been played by the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) of B'nai B'rith. This is not at all surprising when we remember that the ADL was created by the B'nai B'rith in order to run such dirty operations; and that the B'nai B'rith, while nominally Jewish, is itself one of the many Masonic organizations created by the British when Lord Palmerston was prime minister, in the 1840s.

On May 26, the week before the election, the Washington Post carried a feature on the Israeli elections in its Sunday magazine. It described an incident which occurred on May 21, 1995, well before the assassination of Rabin. At that time, a left-wing member of the Israeli Knesset (parliament) and member of Israeli cabinet, Shulamit Aloni, was physically attacked during a meeting of the American Jewish community which took place in New York City. At issue was the Israeli peace policy, which was opposed by the ADL-led forces and other conservative groups.

The individual who brutally attacked Aloni, Jack R. Avital, was a well-known leader of New York's Jewish community. After brutally hitting Aloni in the stomach, Avital was allowed to lead a march of 30,000 Jews up Fifth Avenue, along with the official Israeli delegation and New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani.

This incident foreshadowed the later assassination of Prime Minister Rabin; during the same period, Israeli government representatives were being routinely mistreated when they attended religious services in New York.

In July 1995, Rabin responded to the diktat by 1,000 Orthodox rabbis, who, meeting in New York City, instructed Israeli soldiers not to obey orders for them to withdraw from bases or settlements on the West Bank. At the time, Rabin attacked this outrage, saying: "I hear strange calls from a group of rabbis from the United States, for whom the name ayatollahs is perhaps better suited than rabbis."

On Nov. 5, eulogizing Prime Minister Rabin, Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat said that, together, he and Rabin were making "the peace of the brave. . . . So this loss is not only a loss for the Israelis and the Palestinians, but the whole world." More recently, Arafat denounced Arab terrorist groups for deliberately intervening into the Israeli election by attempting to discredit Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

The defeat of Peres has been another blow to the peace process. While the conservative Jewish extremists in the United States played a decisive role in this, the ostensibly liberal Anti-Defamation League is part of the same operation.

The assigned task of all these British-run groups, is the defeat of President Clinton in this year's Presidential election. To accomplish this, they are working to destroy the Democratic Party from within, undermining its viability. These treacherous pawns of the House of Windsor will do everything in their power to get rid of the LaRouche wing of the Democratic Party, which stands in their way.

A lesson to be learned from the defeat of the Israeli Labor Party, is the danger of pulling one's punches—whether in a combat situation or an election campaign. Be it the nation of Israel or the Democratic Party in the United States, there is no room for compromise when it comes to defeating British operations intended to destroy one's nation.
