

Hollinger hit-man targets al-Fayeds

After six months of absence from the pages of the Hollinger press, the Telegraph newspaper's leading poison pen, Ambrose Evans-Pritchard, has surfaced with a series of vile slander stories, targeting Mohamed al-Fayed, the father of the late Dodi Fayed, and the owner of Harrods Ltd. department store.

From 1993 to the summer of 1997, Evans-Pritchard was the Washington bureau chief of the Sunday Telegraph, in which capacity he led a non-stop effort to destroy the Clinton Presidency — on behalf of the British Crown and British intelligence. In a candid 1994 interview with a Washington journalist, Evans-Pritchard boasted that he worked closely with MI6 station chiefs in every country where he was assigned as a "journalist." His father, Sir Edward Evans-Pritchard, was a cultural anthropologist who worked for British Military Intelligence and the British Colonial Office in Africa.

Ambrose Evans-Pritchard first surfaced against the al-Fayed family in the Dec. 1, 1997 issue of the Daily Telegraph, co-authoring a story with the paper's chief City correspondent, Philip Johnston. The story was a fabrication, which claimed that unions representing workers at Harrods were planning to sue Mohamed al-Fayed over alleged "phone tapping."

On Dec. 5, Evans-Pritchard wrote another slander, which sought to portray Mohamed al-Fayed as paranoid about threats to his life. The story gave details about the security arrangements of the Harrods owner, based on information provided by a disgruntled former security director, who has been otherwise implicated in the recent deployment of House of Windsor thug Tiny Rowland, against the al-Fayed interests. — Jeffrey Steinberg ain's equivalent to the American National Security Agency (NSA), had been monitoring Dodi Fayed's mobile telephone at the time of the crash.

"British secret agents had been monitoring Dodi Fayed's mobile phone calls—including intimate ones with Princess Diana," The People reported. "The Government's huge GCHQ secret communications station also listened for information that would link him with shady businessmen and drug dealers."

The People's Paul Baldwin continued: "A Whitehall source has revealed that many MI6 officers, who swear an oath of allegiance to the Crown, wanted to dig up dirt on the playboy film producer." The source told Baldwin, "MI6 knew that any revelations about Dodi and drugs would force the Princess to break off her relationship with him."

A leading British security specialist, interviewed by EIR following the publication of the Nov. 30 The People story, added another dimension. While Cheltenham GCHQ would have all the necessary technology in-house to monitor all of Dodi Fayed's mobile phone conversations in Britain, they would have to obtain the cooperation of the French authorities to carry out similar monitoring while he was in France. Such cooperation is routine, the source pointed out. "You go in with an official piece of paper and you wave it, saying, 'I am from GCHQ, or MI6, or whatever, and we are interested in these particular numbers. . . .' You are working as a foreign agency in another country. In order for them to monitor a phone in Europe, they would have to have the assistance of the local authorities."

The source reiterated that GCHQ, in order to monitor Dodi Fayed's mobile phone, had the cooperation of the French, "without a doubt. If we can tie this down, it proves them as being totally complicit."

Royals were steering MI6 campaign vs. Diana, Dodi

On Aug. 31, the day of the crash that killed Princess Diana, Dodi Fayed, and Henri Paul, the London Sunday Mirror published a brief news item, by Andrew Golden, under the headline, "Queen to Strip Harrods of Its Royal Quest." The article established that, at the time of Princess Diana's death, the Windsors had been conducting a covert war against the former wife of Prince Charles, her friend Dodi Fayed, and Dodi's father, Mohamed al-Fayed, already a longtime target of Windsor venom, and of dirty tricks by royal asset Tiny Rowland.

"The royal family may withdraw their seal of approval from Harrods as a result of Diana's affair with the owner's son Dodi Fayed," the Mirror story began.

"Senior Palace courtiers are ready to advise the Queen that she should refuse to renew the prestigious royal warrants for the Knightsbridge store when they come up for review in February.

"It would be a huge blow to the ego of store owner Mohamed Al Fayed—and would infuriate Diana, who was yesterday understood to be still with Dodi aboard his yacht, near the Italian island of Sardinia. But the royal family are furious about the frolics of Di, 36, and Dodi, 41, which they believe have further undermined the monarchy."

The Mirror singled out Prince Philip as one architect of the Windsors' campaign against Diana and Dodi. "Prince Philip, in particular," Golden wrote, "has made no secret as to how he feels about his daughter-in-law's latest man, referring to Dodi as an 'oily bed-hopper.' ”

But, it was not Philip alone who had it in for Princess Diana and the al-Fayed family. The formal structure of the monarchy had taken up the war against the Spencer and al-Fayed families as a royal priority, according to the Mirror.

“At Balmoral next week, the Queen will preside over a meeting of The Way Ahead Group where the Windsors sit down with their senior advisers and discuss policy matters.

“MI6 has prepared a special report on the Egyptian-born Fayeds which will be presented to the meeting.”

The Sunday Mirror report turned back to the role of Prince Philip:

“The delicate subject of Harrods and its royal warrants is also expected to be discussed. And the Fayeds can expect little sympathy from Philip.

“A friend of the royals said yesterday: ‘Prince Philip has let rip several times recently about the Fayeds—at a dinner party, during a country shoot and while on a visit to close friends in Germany.

“‘He’s been banging on about his contempt for Dodi and how he is undesirable as a future stepfather to William and Harry.

“‘Diana has been told in no uncertain terms about the consequences should she continue the relationship with the Fayed boy.’ ”

As EIR has reported since 1994, Prince Philip functions, not only as the chief of a worldwide ecological-terrorist apparatus, run through his World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF) and its secret funding arm, the 1001 Club. He has also presided, for the past 40 years, over the Club of the Isles, the London-centered secret structure of the global financial oligarchy, which draws upon several thousand of the most powerful families of the Anglo-Dutch elite.

Even more ominous is the fact that assets of Prince Philip’s WWF/1001 Club combine, including the late Canadian Special Operations Executive (SOE) wartime spy, Maj. Louis Mortimer Bloomfield, were strongly implicated in the early 1960s assassinations of President John F. Kennedy, and Italian patriot Enrico Mattei. More recently, the same WWF-centered apparatus threatened the life of French President Jacques Chirac, when Chirac briefly flirted with the idea of building a strong relationship between France and the United States—at the expense of Great Britain.

Given this murderous track record of Prince Philip’s apparatus, the closing sentence of the Sunday Mirror article was particularly chilling:

“But now the royal family may have decided it is time to settle up” (emphasis in the original).

The Mirror story hit the British newsstands just as Britons were learning about the deaths of Princess Diana, Dodi Fayed, and Henri Paul.
