

LaRouche stressed, is central to the Presidential election's outcome. His fundamental argument is that a candidate must provide Presidential leadership for the nation in the course of his campaign—"campaign by acting to change the country"—in order to qualify as fit to hold the Presidency.

'Recall Deregulation, Not Davis'

"Deregulation was bad; recall is even worse. Please, don't be a sucker for the same swindle twice!" warns the candidate's Foreword to his campaign white paper already circulating in tens of thousands in California, along with leaflets describing Schwarzenegger as "A Living Case of Stage Fright." Hundreds of LaRouche Youth Movement organizers and older activists are mobilized in the state, even as the youth movement continues to expand around the rest of the country (several hundred youth organizers attended the East Coast conference sessions in Virginia).

Presidential pre-candidate Lyndon LaRouche delivers keynote on Aug. 30, calling for the defeat of the deregulation "freak show" in California. Part of his audience of 650 in Reston, Virginia listens; another 450 attended in Los Angeles.

Along with the white paper are bumper stickers which say "Vote for the Man, Not the Machine" (Schwarzenegger's standard movie role is a robot) and "One Imported Austrian Head of State Was Enough." LaRouche's Foreword contin-

Dymally: Revitalize Democrats

Former Congressman and current California Assemblyman Mervyn Dymally offered these remarks to the Schiller Institute conference on Sept. 2, speaking from Burbank, Calif.

I'm here today to challenge you, to save the Democratic Party from extinction in California.

We are faced with a crisis of unprecedented dimensions. They tried their best to steal the Presidency, and we beat them. They stole Florida with the support of U.S. Supreme Court, and now today they're trying to steal California. And I believe, if you do, in the next two or three weeks, as well as you do during the entire year, we can turn them back, and we can beat the recall.

Yesterday, my staff and I spent a great deal of time, with Sam [Dixon, a LaRouche Youth Movement organizer], working out a schedule. We're going to go up the valley, and down the coast, taking the word, with your help, to revitalize the Democratic Party, to put some new life in the party, and save the party from being extinguished. We run a good chance of seeing this country become a fascist country, if we do not stop it.

Now I'm attracted to your movement, because of Harley, who understands what friendship is. When I don't call him, he calls me. But I'm attracted because of some personal experiences that I've had.

During my time in Congress, like the rest of the uninformed members of Congress, I paid very little attention to the role of the IMF. Until I went back home in Trinidad, to see where they had taken over a government. As a little boy, as a colonial, we had free health service, free water, free transportation, free electrical power. They have taken over—the IMF—taken over electrical power, taken over water, transportation. They have taken over the country. So, I had a personal experience, about the role of the IMF, and so that began to make me recollect the mistakes I made in Congress, and why it is I need to be teaming up with you.

I thank you very much for this opportunity. I'm looking forward to working with you. As soon as the [legislative] session adjourns, on Sept. 12, I'll be on the road. Thank you very much.
