

evelt’s Tennessee Valley Authority. Obama’s policies not only prohibit any further such “improvements,” but commit the Federal government to rolling back improvements accomplished by previous generations, turning the waters and the associated lands back into wilderness.

The EO establishes a National Ocean Council within the government, tasked with implementing the recommendations of an interagency task force that Obama created a year ago. In its report, released also on July 19, the taskforce outlined a program for declaring huge swathes of U.S. waters to be virtual ecological nature parks, off-limits to human activity. They call this “coastal and marine spatial planning,” which aims to remedy (i.e., reverse) the fact that “human uses” of the oceans and waters are increasing.

The delighted WWF proclaimed that “for the first time, there will be a coordinated system for managing America’s oceans, coasts and Great Lakes”—a system which is to be run by the same people who are willfully overseeing the destruction of the ecosystem of the Gulf of Mexico!

Furthermore, as WWF chairman emeritus William Reilly, co-chair of the “independent” commission appointed by Obama to cover up BP’s destruction of the Gulf, made clear in Politico on April 22, the system is yet another end-run around Constitutional, Congressional action. “In the absence of action by Congress, President Barack Obama instructed an interagency task force to craft an oceans policy that can be implemented by executive order,” Reilly wrote.

Pro-PLHINO Movement in Sonora, Mexico Blasts WWF

As Americans rally around Lyndon LaRouche’s call for the immediate implementation of NAWAPA, against the murderous British policy demanded by their agencies such as the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), allied forces in Mexico have escalated their attack on the WWF, and in favor of both NAWAPA and the related PLHINO great water project for northwest Mexico.

A July 29 statement, issued by the Citizens’ Movement for Water, denounces the July 28 decision by the official CONAGUA (National Water Commission), headed by the fanatical environmentalist and WWF errand boy José Luis Luege Tamarco, to authorize the construction of an aqueduct to channel water from the Novillo Dam to the city of Hermosillo—which would destroy agriculture in the south of the state—as a strategy of “financial powers which would convert Sonora into a guinea pig of their water privatization policies and destroy national food producing capabilities.”

The statement attacks the plan to hand over water resources to private interests, such as Carlos Slim—

the WWF-allied richest man in the world—which represent “supra-national foreign interest enclaves, which, disguised as defenders of the ecology, intend to seize control of the nation’s strategic and natural resources. This is demonstrated in the $100 million agreement, signed on June 5, 2009, among the Ministry of Environment and Natural Resources, Carlos Slim, and the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), an international organization which is directly controlled by British financial interests.”

The statement counterposes to this British looting, “the constitutional principle that water belongs to the nation, which may grant concessions for the benefit of the entire population and the development of the national economy.” The Citizens’ Movement for Water has called for “Sonora to keep conquering the desert . . . with the fight for desalination of seawater and great infrastructure projects . . . such as the PLHINO.”

LaRouche organizers in Mexico have long emphasized the urgency of implementing the U.S.-Mexico-Canada NAWAPA project, to which the PLHINO is complementary. The Citizens’ Movement for Water is an umbrella group led by LaRouche’s associates in the area, which, over the last couple of months, has organized rallies in support of the PLHINO and desalination, which have drawn upwards of 30,000 participants.
