From the Editors

The most powerful force in the world is an idea, as the history of mankind's progress in civilization demonstrates absolutely. This edition of EIR aims to give you the ideas you require right now, to deal with a world teetering on the edge of disaster.

Lyndon LaRouche provides the strategic overview, in his webcast of March 28, the transcript of which we publish in full. His discussion of the financial "bail-in" crisis, driven by the desperation of the British Empire, and how to deal with it, provides the insight which world leaders are already looking to, and which must become the standard for action in the U.S. today.

In effect, all our other articles elaborate on that overview, ranging from Helga Zepp-LaRouche's international lead on the choice between Obama's war and Chinese President Xi Jinping's offer of economic development facing Europe, to Michael Billington's report on the Empire's destabilization of Asia, to the shocking picture of what the European Union looting has done to Greece—a stark object-lesson for Ukraine and other nations.

Then there are two extraordinary feature packages. One, under the heading of War on Drugs, presents the sharp intervention of the Russian leadership against the de facto support for the international drug trade, at a recent meeting in Moscow, which Washington and the EU decided to boycott. We publish both a news report, and major excerpts of the speech by Russia's leading anti-drug official, Victor Ivanov, which provide concepts for solutions along the same lines that the LaRouche movement has proposed.

Secondly, the Science section contains two articles by Lyndon LaRouche, and one by LaRouchePAC research team leader Jason Ross. LaRouche continues to hammer away at the evil axioms of Bertrand Russell, which have corrupted the thinking of not only scientists, but our entire society, thus allowing the Zeusian empire now centered in London to turn leaders of society internationally into slaves. And he, of course, presents the clear alternative, from Promethean scientists such as Brunelleschi, Cusa, Kepler, Planck, Einstein, and others. Ross's article serves as a companion piece, elaborating on the work of Kurt Gödel in refuting Russell—a subject LaRouche took up most recently in our last issue.
